Reason for Reevaluation

Caleb is being reevaluated as part of the required review of special education eligibility and educational need. Caleb Nguyen currently has an IEP addressing reading. This psychoeducational reevaluation provides cognitive and processing context. It is not a substitute for academic achievement testing.

Sources of Information

Information available to the evaluator on the evaluation date includes the reevaluation plan, review of educational records, teacher description of classroom performance, and direct observation during the evaluation session.

- Reevaluation plan
- Review of existing educational records
- Teacher information regarding classroom reading tasks
- Student observation during the evaluation session

Cognitive / Processing Context

Cognitive ability is broadly within the average range. Performance across verbal reasoning, visual-spatial reasoning, and working-memory tasks was consistent with age expectations. Processing speed observed during structured tasks was not identified as a global limitation. Caleb participated cooperatively and understood ordinary verbal directions.

No global cognitive limitation is identified as the primary explanation for the documented reading concern. General reasoning is adequate to benefit from classroom instruction when material is accessible.

Educational Interpretation

Cognitive ability is broadly within the average range. General reasoning, working memory, and verbal comprehension observed during this reevaluation are consistent with age expectations. No global cognitive limitation is identified as the primary explanation for the documented reading concern. Classroom information indicates that reading remains an area of instructional attention under the current IEP. This report does not replace academic achievement testing.

Recommendations

Complete current academic achievement assessment, including reading comprehension and fluency, before the reevaluation eligibility meeting.

This report does not determine special education eligibility and does not assign IEP services or annual goals.
